DIED WITH FATHER AS SHE WISHED TO

Daughter Fatally Stricken Few Hours After Her Parent Had Passed Away.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—"When you die, father, I want to die too," said Miss Mary E. Lator, to her father, Nicholas B. Lator, a wealthy retired contractor, when they were celebrating the seventy-fourth birthday of Mr. Lator a few weeks ago. In the family residence, No. 2148 Washington Avenue, she died.

"I should much like to live when you are gone in my child," was the father's answer, and no younger children present understood the spirit of these birthday wishes between the aged man and his oldest daughter, who had been inseparable companions all her life. She had been his special comrade and reliance since the death of her mother years ago.

Miss Lator was past forty years of age, and her devotion to her father and constant care of him seemed to have kept her from all thought of marriage. When he became ill shortly after his birthday she attended him devotedly and rejoiced when he appeared to improve and his recovery seemed likely. The strain of her nursing weakened the daughter, and her brother and sister rejoiced that the improvement in their father's health would give her an opportunity to recuperate.

Then the father was suddenly stricken and fatally. From just Saturday until Monday morning he lay at death's door, and early Monday morning he passed away.

Miss Lator hardly spoke after her father's death. The blow utterly crushed her, and an hour after he died she was found unconscious in her room, stricken with apoplexy. Before nightfall she, too, had died and gone to the father to whom she was so devoted.

Dr. Woodruff L. Post, who lives at No. 2121 Bayard Avenue, was in attendance upon the father, and after his death upon Miss Lator. He witnessed her devotion to her father, and said yesterday that undoubtedly shock and grief had brought on the fatal apoplectic stroke.

MOONSHINE OPERATIONS.

Large Illicit Distillery Raided in Isle of Wight County.

Deputy collectors of internal revenue, acting under the orders of Revenue Agent Thompson of this city, have recently raided a large illicit distillery in Isle of Wight county, capturing a large outfit and the products of the distillery. The still is said to be the largest ever captured in the State, and its operation in a section where moonshine operations were suspected has been received with surprise.

The still was located near Holland, and had been in operation until a few hours before the revenue sleuths swooped down upon it. The still had a daily capacity of 264 gallons, and another, captured near by, produced forty-five gallons a day. The still was on the farm of T. T. Jenkins and is said to be in view of the residence. The still was warm and there was still some fire in the furnace. The fine outfit of the distillery was captured and destroyed.

The operators of the unlawful plant evidently received word of the coming of the officers and made their escape. There is little doubt that some arrests will soon follow.

YANKEES CHEERED HIM. Impersonation of Gen. Lee Enthusiastically Received.

A prominent business man of Richmond, who spending some time in Philadelphia, writes interestingly to a friend here of how generously an impersonation of General Robert E. Lee was received in a theatre of that city.

"Monday night," he writes, "I attended Keith's Chestnut Street Theatre; one of the chauterous, and by far the best I ever saw of its kind, was Henry Lee, impersonating President Roosevelt, Mark Twain, Emperor William II, Gzar Nicholas, the Mikado, General Czar Nicholas, and General Robert E. Lee.

"In each character or personating act the audience cheered and applauded him, just what General Robert E. Lee was personated. I never in all my life heard a louder or longer applause."

Several people so loudly cheered that it was several moments before the house was quiet again. No character has ever been more liberally applauded than that of "Marse Robert" in Philadelphia Monday night."

TACKLES BULL FIGHTER. Pardello Wrestled Neromus in New York Last Night.

Leo Pardello, who is to arrive here to-day to wrestle M. J. Dwyer in the Academy of Music to-morrow night, wrestled Neromus, the Mexican bull fighter and wrestler in New York last night.

Neromus was to have wrestled a wild bull in Canada last Saturday, but could not do so, on account of the heavy snow on the ground, and the performance was postponed for two weeks. Efforts will be made to have the Mexican come here to wrestle.

Dwyer will wrestle Rob Roy Mackey of Washington, in Petersburg to-night. The Richmond wrestler is training hard and is at the Reservoir Park every day, getting in good condition for the two bouts arranged for this week.
